To Whom It May Concern:

Thaddeus Rex recently performed for students at Eisenhower Elementary in Dubuque, Iowa. What a treat! He had the entire crowd dancing and moving and smiling. More importantly, he emphasized the value of reading, writing, and imagination. Through song and movement, he reminded students that books have a positive impact on your life while television makes your brain numb.

The school library has two CDs of his music and classroom teachers plan to take advantage of the lesson plans posted on his website. Teachers are always looking for resources to motivate students to read and write and Thaddeus Rex has the right combination to deliver that important message.

I highly recommend Thaddeus Rex to any school searching for a motivating and entertaining assembly for students.
