To Whom It May Concern:

Thaddeus Rex visited Esther Jackson Elementary School in Roswell, Georgia on March 22, 2004. He captivated his audience of pre-kindergarteners through fifth graders telling original stories, playing the guitar, and singing. He entertained the group of more than 450 students and teachers by getting them actively involved in the stories with body movements and verbal responses.

All the students were every impressed with T-Rex's performance and have been talking about it for days. The students of Esther Jackson reactions to the performance tell all. One third grade student said, "My favorite part was when he used his imagination to take us on a trip to see dinosaurs. And another funny part was when he told us that his dog ate the plant and threw up on his bed." Another student commented on T-Rex's show by saying, "I liked his show because it tells me about things that I need to know." Overall the presentation taught students, got them excited about reading, and gave them an opportunity to utilize their imagination and let it run wild. I would recommend T-Rex to any school and any grade level, I was very impressed.
